FEW NEW BILLS.

The Long Session of Congress Shows Very Few Results

In the Way of New Legislation Enacted.

GOOD TIMES AHEAD.

A Big Revival of Business is Confidently Predicted.

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 11 .- [Special.]-"I am not worried much by the delay of the senate," said Mr. McNagny of Indiana in a summary of prospects in his district, "for I think they will succeed in getting the new tariff into operation just in time for a tremendous revival of business. It will come about the turn of the season, as we say in Indiana, and will work well in my district. The Democrats there have reversed the usual process this year. They lost the municipal elections and have there fore harmonized early and gone to work for November, while the Republicans have already quarreled over their successes. Everything is in good shape for a revival. The supply of coal is so nearly exhausted that next Christmas to catch up with the demand, and then, as has been so often stated, the shelves are bare of goods, and consumptive demand will force great activity. It is the fashion to say that the Democrats blunder at the critical time, but I am satisfied the Republicans have done it this year in delaying action on the tariff."

Isidor Rayner's Speech. This sort of consolation is becoming quite common among the majority members, and even those who are sore over the financial measures find some relief in it. It is almost a pity that the bill to repeal the tax on state bank issues had to be side tracked, for the debate on it was both entertaining and instructive, and it got better the longer it Insted. The speech of Isidor Rayner against state banks was particularly able, except the usual errors in history which are so common in the debates on finance, and the fact that his blows were telling was evidenced by the number of interruptions, Messrs. Boatner, Bailey, Cox and Warner were all after him at one time, and no sooner would the chairman get them to sit down and the speaker utter a sentence or two when two or three more members would pop up and refuse to be silenced. The wit and humor of this running debate were very largely mingled with sarcasm, and it was evident that the state bank men felt the irritation due to the consciousness of a losing cause. Their best counting showed a majority of 30 against the repeal, and so they were quite willing to let the measure be side tracked for the present.

Work of the Session Practically Done. The calculations of the managers of the measures next in order varied greatly, but all admitted that the end of the session is estponed. For the Indian appropriation bill they allowed from two to five days, for James T. Bradley, M. E. Richardson, W. the bill appropriating $200,000 to the international cotton exposition of next year at Atlanta at least two days. These have the right of way, and the hope is still indulged that by the time they are done with or done for the tariff bill will come back from the senate. "It will be discussed with great liveliness," says Hon. John J. O'Neill, "but it will pass just the same. The opposition will be sporadic and not organized. The members will seek to emphasize their individual opposition to certain features of it, but the bill will pass." Other members express a conviction that it will pass substantially as it comes from the senate, members of the house being, as a rule, much more eager to get things done and get home than senators. Many other measures, very many indeed, will die for want of time. Practically, say the older heads, the work of the session is done, its record is made, and it will go to the country with the appropriation bills and the tariff bill, the re peal of the Sherman law and the federal election law as its record of work. This is about all, they say, that will really be done at the date of adjournment, which they now considerately name as "some time in July." Bills Which Will Not Pass.

This leaves out a great many measures as to which even their authors now give up hope for this session and are not very enthusiastic for the next. There are all the agricultural bills, with antioption at the head of them; all the bills for irrigating all creation out west; nearly all the measures from the judiciary committee and all that beautiful mess which comes in every year from the advocates of education, labor reform, temperance and so forth-that vast herd of bills to make everybody virtuous and happy by act of congress. With these must go the 15 or more bills to improve the currency in various ways, the best known of which are Mr. Walker's somewhat elaborate bill, Mr. Cooper's bill permitting the taxation of greenbacks, Mr. Brookshire's bill for regulating money in general and Mr. Meyer's bill for coining the seigniorage on a plan that will obviate the objections set forth in the president's veto. All these, too, make but a small part of the many bills which must go over, though a few of them likely to excite very little discussion may be slipped through.

As to passing or even considering one in 50 of the bills referred to the committee on war claims, congress never thinks of doing that. As a Republican member very wittily expressed it the other day when some one chided him for voting to set aside the regular order (it was private bill day) and continue the discussion on state banks, "It is only a question between wildcat money and old rebel claims anyhow." In this sentence is explained a great deal of the weariness the house has shown over these private bill days, and a kindred sentiment accounts for that over the Friday night sessions. At these last there have been at least 250 hours of discussion and more than twice as many angry altercations, to say nothing of hundreds of little spats and pungent personalities, and as a result of it all there have not been 10 bills made laws. In fact, it would not be safe to say without a minute examination of the senate journal that a single measure introduced at these

Friday night sessions had yet become a law. It is worth noting also that, while a vast mass of business, and some little of it important, must go over to the short session, there is a very strong impression among the older members that there will be enough of entirely new business to consume all the time of that session not given to the regular appropriation bills. It is not easy to ling, etc.

give all the reasons for this impression, but many of them are connected with our foreign relations.

QUAY GROWS ANGRY.

Accused of Doing Work For a Street [Railway Syndicate.

Washington, June 11.—Senator Quay created a slight diversion in the senate this morning, by rising to a question of privilege, and sending to the clerk's desk what he characterized as a "lying statement for which Senator Chandler is given as authority.'

It proved to be a Washington dispatch to a New York paper alleging that a Philadelphia syndicate of which Mr. Quay was the active agent, was seeking to get control of the surface roads of Washington through congressional leg-islation. The dispatch stated that the scheme was as malodorous as the sugar trust scandal.

Mr. Quay made a personal explanation after the clerk had read the article. The statements contained in it, he said, were absolutely false. The facts were, said, that certain citizens of Philadelphia, of whom Thomas Dolan was one (who the others were he knew not) had corporate interests in certain railroads in the District of Columbia and were seeking an enlargement of the scope of their franchises; in what way he knew not. At the request of Mr. Dolan, he (Quay) had done for the Philadelphia gentlemen what he would do for any other citizen of Pennsylvania; he had introduced them to McMillan and Faulkner of the District of Columbia committee

At the request of Mr. Dolan he had not talked with either of those senators since. Last Friday, being informed that when this strike is over the mines will run that bill effecting the interests of this day and night for six months. It will take corporation would be under consideraall the coal miners in the United States till | tion in the house today he had asked some of the members of the delegation from Pennsylvania to be present to help constitute a quorum. That was the whole of his connection with the matter.

Mr. Quay said that in making this exlanation he had departed from his usual custom of treating with the silent con-tempt the hundred thousand lies made up about him, for two reasons; first, because the article was evidently written with the purpose of affecting legislation, and second, because Mr. Chandler had been given as authority for the statements contained therein.

Mr. Chandler made a statement, when Mr. Quay took his seat, to the effect that he heard of this syndicate; had perhaps discussed the matter with newspaper men, but knew little about it. He had never heard of Mr. Dolan until this moment. Certainly he had made no remarks attributing motives or relations to any senator.

Mr. Quay suggested with a broad smile that this newspaper fabrication be referred to the "scandal committee," which Mr. Gray was chairman, and with easy-going senatorial way, there being no objection beyond a slight frown on Senator Lindsay's face, it was so re-

The numerous candidates for county commissioner, opposing the incumbent, who appears to desire the office for life, have earned the gratitude of the Republican masses by uniting on one man. Candidates for office are generally slow to yield their personal wishes and often each believes he is stronger than the other. But in the interest of good politics, with a commendable desire to place in nomination a strong man who will not be defeated at the polls, all the opposing candidates have generously united on T. P. Rodgers.

The Journal endorses this action and hopes to see the movement ratified at the primaries next Saturday. Mr. Rodgers can be cheerfully voted for by all Republicans who have the interest of the county as well as the party, in view.

Mr. Rodgers is an experienced business man and has always been a Republican. He comes of a strong Republican family, of good birth and associations. At the beginning of the war he enlisted private in the Forty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry and served with distinction with that regiment on many hard fought fields, only receiving a scratch or two until the Vicksburg campaign, at which time he was severely wounded in the thigh, disabling him for awhile. He soon returned to his regiment and served until the end of the war, being mustered out with the rank of first lieutenant. He came to Topeka in 1869, and with his brothers A. K. and A. T., opened a grocery business in which he was quite successful, continuing same for twelve years. He is proud of the fact that during all this time he was friendly to the working man. Many of the older Santa Fe men remember his kind deeds to them. "I never garnisheed a customer," says Mr. Rodgers. ## NEWS OF KANSAS.

A Coffeyville Crank Said the Angels Were Coming

And He Wanted the Church Bells Rung.

OTHER STATE NEWS.

Ex-Judge Botkin on Irrigation as a Remedy for Shooting.

Coffeyville, June 11 .- A young man dressed in cowboy attire called at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage and inquired for Rev. Mr. Freed. When that gentleman arrived at the door he found the young fellow standing on the porch with one hand on his hip pocket.

In reply to Rev. Mr. Freed's question as to what he could do for him, the young fellow said he wanted him to go at once and ring the church bell. When asked what he wanted the bell rung for, he said that he desired to have the citizens all brought together, as the angels were going to visit Coffeyville and everybody ought to turn out and hear them sing.

He was finally persuaded to leave the premises, and coming down the street he mounted his horse, rode north as far as the school house and then turned east, Marshal Loving started after him, but failed to find him.

GIRARD, June 11 .- W. H. Young, who resides on the McKsy farm north of Brazilton, shot W. R. Weaver, also a farmer living near by. Young, accom-panied by his son, immediately drove to town and gave himself up to the sheriff and is now in the county jail.

Young gave the following account of the shooting: Young and his wife started to Walnut in a wagon and on the way met Weaver and his wife also in a wagon Weaver had been talking about Young and Young hailed him about it. Words followed and Weaver gathered a club. Young told Weaver not to hit him or he would kill him. Weaver did strike him and he grabbed Weaver's whiskers and pulled out a handful. He then stepped back, pulled his revolver and shot Weaver. Young said he did not know whether he killed Weaver or not.

Winning a Case.

Mr. Sergeant Wilkins once defended a breach of promise case for a singularly ugly little man, which he told the defendant, after reading his brief, must be "bounced" through. And the sergeant did bounce it through in a truly remarkable manner. "Gentlemen of the jury," he said at the close of a most eloquent speech, "you have heard the evidence for the plaintiff, and, gentlemen of the jury, you have seen and have admired that most bewitching plaintiff herself. Gentlemen, do you believe that this enchanting, this fascinating, this captivating, this accomplished lady would for one moment favor the advances or listen with anything save scorn and indignation to the amorous protestations of the wretched and repulsive homunculus, the deformed and degraded defendant?"

His client looked up from the well of the court and piteously murmured: "Mr. Sergeant Wilkins! Oh, Mr. Sergeant Wilkins!

"Silence, sir," replied the sergeant in a wrathful undertone. "Gentlemen," he continued, bringing his fist down heavily on the desk before him, "do you think that this lovely lady, this fair and smiling creature, would ever have permitted an offer of marriage to be made to her by this miserable atom of humanity, this stunted creature, who would have to stand on a sheet of note paper to look over twopence?

The jury at once gave a verdict for the defendant.-Argonaut.
